Motivation

EXPERIENCE AND BACKGROUND

How is your education and experience relevant to this particular profile?

* Please note that while I am not currently employed by an EU institution, I will be a Blue Book trainee during the March 2025 session ****

With a background in linguistics and conference interpreting, I bring a deep understanding of differences between languages and the cultures associated with them. My educational background helps me quickly understand the source language, while the cultural sensitivity I have developed through personal experience helps me express nuances in the target language. Furthermore, as a naturalised German citizen, I have a strong admiration for the EU's history and values. This motivates me to develop my insight into EU affairs and place national issues in the European context. Finally, my organisational skills allow me to consistently work within deadlines while maintaining a high quality.

INTEREST TO APPLY

Why do you want to apply for this particular career opportunity?

You should also explain why this particular profile interests you.

* Please note that while I am not currently employed by an EU institution, I will be a Blue Book trainee during the March 2025 session ****

I have a deep-rooted fascination for languages and for facilitating communication across different languages. What others may think of as splitting hairs is a pleasurable undertaking for me, because I appreciate precision and accuracy despite inherent differences not only between languages, but between the people that speak them. Translation work at the EU is particularly appealing to me because of the wide variety of complex texts to be dealt with, as this gives me the opportunity to 'translate' my interest into meaningful work. After all, the EU's commitment to multilingualism is made possible by translators and interpreters. This career opportunity permits me to aid in this effort and is the ideal confluence of my educational background, professional aspirations, and personal values.

CONTRIBUTION TO EU

What specific contribution do you think you could make to the work of the European institutions and agencies?
In what role could you best contribute? What particular strengths would you bring to your work?

* Please note that while I am not currently employed by an EU institution, I will be a Blue Book trainee during the March 2025 session ****

As someone with a mixed background and skillset, I am certain that working for EU institutions and agencies would not just be of value to me personally, but also contribute to upholding the values of linguistic diversity and equal representation. I bring to the table a multicultural perspective, ensuring that my work is appropriate for diverse audiences. Moreover, with my fluency in multiple languages, including Indian languages, I can contribute to a wide range of translation projects. As a future terminology trainee at the European Commission, I am well on my way to refining my skillset even further. Finally, my training as a conference interpreter equips me with the rapid analytical skills and adaptability suitable for the complex concepts and variation in subject matters handled by EU institutions.

STRENGTHS

Both of the achievements I would like to discuss here are relatively recent. Firstly, I achieved fluency

Outline two of your main achievements. Describe what they are, the process you went through and their positive outcomes for you and for others.

in German within approximately one year of arriving in Germany in 2018. I immersed myself almost immediately in the language by taking up part-time employment and an advanced language course shortly after my arrival. My husband's family—native Germans—were a significant support at the time, switching by my request to English only when absolutely necessary. The progress I made in learning the language motivated me to do other things I had been meaning to do, but never got around to, like learning how to swim and acquiring a driving licence. The positive outcome for me was the ability to fully and meaningfully participate in all aspects of private and public life. For others, I was able to quickly become a productive member of society, contributing not only to a more inclusive community, but motivating others like me to prioritise learning the language quickly. Secondly, I would like to highlight my academic success, completing both my bachelor's and master's degree in Germany with high marks, overcoming the challenges of adapting to a new country and educational system. I developed effective time management strategies to balance studies and work with personal goals and commitments. The positive outcome for me are the valuable qualifications and insights I have gained, as well as fluency in an additional language (French). As an Erasmus student and through my naturalisation, I have contributed to positive growth in EU ideals and intercultural communication.
